

Kids' Pack

Congratulations!

You're a Junior Road Safety Officer

Your job is to tell everyone in your school how to stay safe on the road – and to have fun while you do it!

There's information in this pack to help you talk about road safety, run cool competitions, put posters up around your school – and find new ways to get the word out about road safety.

One of your school teachers or assistants will be your school helper. They can help you be the best Junior Road Safety Officer (JRSO) possible.

My job

In this pack you'll find everything you need to do your job. Ideas for competitions, talk about road safety in assembly or in the classroom and put up posters around your school. We have included useful things to help you, like certificates to give to competition winners and there's also a year planner. Why not have a meeting with your school helper or teacher to decide where you're going to start?

Additional role

JRSOs also have the opportunity to get involved with patrolling outside their school, with Police Community Support Officers, as Pupil Traffic Wardens. They help to stop people parking dangerously on pavements, yellow lines, dropped kerbs and zigzag markings by asking parents to move to safer places and park in a more considerate way.

Staying street safe

Learn how to stay safe on our roads by using the Green Cross Code – and know your puffin from your pelican as you find safer places to cross. Please see the Links page for websites worth surfing for more facts!

Activities

You'll find examples of activities you can use to get your school involved. You'll also find a road safety quiz, words to unscramble, word searches and more. You could use these as competitions or make up your own!

Activity solutions

You'll get all the answers to the activities. If you use the activities as competitions, you can mark entries with your school helper and choose a winner.

Don't forget.....

Only print off the pages that you need, to help save our planet.

Your mission starts here!

Speak up

Tell people about road safety

First things first!

As an official JRSO, your first mission is to introduce yourself in your school assembly.

You can also put your 'All about me' poster on your notice board to make sure everyone knows you're a JRSO. How about adding a photograph of yourself too!

When you've done that, you can start planning talks in assemblies, class or small groups to get the rest of your school involved and help them learn. Once a month you will be sent a bulletin from the Travel Choice Team.

So how do you do it? Here are our top tips:

- Decide on a time with your school helper or teacher.
- Think of ways to get your audience involved and to keep their attention. You could ask questions, get others to help you, or make up songs and plays.
- Use assemblies to talk about new competitions or announce competition winners and give out certificates and/or prizes too.
- Remember practice makes perfect, so practice what you'll say in front of your friends and family.
- Speak loudly, clearly and slowly during your talk, but most of all remember to have fun.

How about inviting your local Police Community Support Officer (PCSO) or School Crossing Patroller (SCP) into your school to see, or even help you with, your assembly.

All about me

I'm your Junior Road Safety Officer.

My name is: _____

from class: _____

Ask me how to learn more about road safety and travelling to school actively and safely.

Win, win, win!

Run competitions

Holding exciting competitions will get everyone in your school interested in road safety.

Follow these steps:

- Pick a topic. Look at your year planner for help or search websites for more information and inspiration on road safety.
- Choose with your school helper the best time to run competitions.
- Think about who the competition is for – is it just for your class, a couple of year groups or the whole school?
- Now decide what type of competition you want to run – see our competition ideas.
- Tell everyone about the competition and when and where they need to hand their entries in. Put up posters, tell people in class or assembly, or use your school website if you have one.
- You can make a collection box for people to post their entries in and put it in a place where everyone can see it. Make sure you tell everyone to write their name and class on the entries so you know who the winner is.
- Next, ask an adult to be a judge and pick the winners of the competition. This could be your school teacher or your head teacher. If the competition is for the whole school, they could choose winners from each year group.
- Give out certificates for the best entries, like our example or design your own. Ask your school helper to photocopy it.
- Write the winner's name, class and what competition they won on the lines. Or you could always design your own.

Run competitions Cont'd

- Your school helper may help you find some prizes to give the winners.
- Why not announce the winners in class or assembly? They could come to the front to collect their certificate or prize. Winning entries could be displayed on a notice board or wall for everyone to see.

Competition ideas

There are endless possibilities for the type of road safety competitions you could run. Here are just a few ideas:

- Use one of the activities provided.
- Write a song, poem or rap – you could ask people to record or perform it.
- Create a word search, crossword or other puzzle.
- Write an advice leaflet to show your school and parents how to stay safe.
- Write a story.
- Make up and perform a roads safety play or advert – you could even film it.
- Find a picture to remind you to be safe, either take a photo, print one from the web or cut it out of a magazine – just add a caption.
- Make a poster with a road safety message.
- Design visible clothing or other products to make you safer.
- Draw a map showing the safer routes to your school.

Competition Winner

This certificate is awarded to:

Name: _____

Class: _____

For: _____

Signed: _____

Junior Road Safety Officer

Headteacher

It's a stick up!

Put up posters

Sticking up posters on your notice boards will remind them who you are and how to stay safe.

Your school helper might be able to help you get different posters too if you want them from the internet (see Links page).

Or you could make your own posters to let people know about your latest competitions or road safety messages. And you can run competitions for everyone to make road safety posters.

Top Tips!

- If you're making your own posters, use bright colours and clear writing so people will remember your road safety messages.
- Remember posters will look great if you put up new information every month.
